Love and the Pay Patient

A Sacrifice and a Big Success.

By L. E. EBERLE.

He signed his name Robert W. Edwards, M. D., and had paid several greatly valued dollars to have it put on a neat brass plate. But really he was Dr. Bob, though he never heard himself called thus till after the very end of the story:

It was Miss Eleanor Blake who called him Dr. Hob. She was careful to let none but her own ears hear the words. When she spoke to him or of him she was most punctilious and respectful.

Miss Eleanor Blake was Dr. Bob's office nurse. Their attitudes toward one another were impeccably professional, but by a strange coincidence Dr. Bob also dropped the formal "Miss Blake" when conversing to his own inner consciousness concerning her. She became "Nellie" on these occasions, which were numerous.

Miss Nurse Blake was well born. She had perceptions. It went to her wholesome heart to see with what smiling poise Dr. Bob waited-and waited. He did not adopt bravado. He never grew embarrassed or apologetic, nor did he flinch in meeting her eyes day after day in the empty rooms.

So she loved him, quite hopelessly, she assured herself, for his quiet, professional manner never broke through

Then came the first call! Eleanor answered the telephone and kept all the elation that was bumping up and down in her heart out of her quiet, businesslike voice as she reported to Dr. Bob. She was only sorry that the patient had not come to the office so that she might have the glory of ushering him in.

Dr. Edwards hurried to the address she gave him. He said, "I don't think I shall be long, Miss Blake," and she said, "Very well, Dr. Edwards."

The address did not indicate a very good part of the city. He could not expect a rich call from that quarter. But it was a beginning—a beginning.

It took Dr. Bob some time to reach the address given him, for it led him by devious ways to an old office building, up many flights of rickety stairs and to a dark room at the end of a hall. There was no response when he knocked, but a frowsy boy from the next office appeared.

"You Doct' Edwards?" he asked. Dr. Bob admitted that he was.

"He told me t' give you this here," said the boy and handed him a folded paper, then disappeared. Dr. Edwards opened the paper. The words "Fooled again" and a slangy sentence or two greeted his eyes. He went downstairs, wondering which of the fellows at the clinic had devised the subtle joke.

Dr. Bob returned quietly to his office. Eleanor, as she saw him return so soon, with his face more quietly composed than ever, conjectured that he had found his patient beyond human help. She was sorry on his account:

She tried to work off her vague feeling of sympathy, for she did not know what, by going into the operating room and cleaning again the often cleaned but never used instruments. She stayed at her work till after hours, till suddenly the consciousness that she was alone and lonely came over her.

She finished her task quickly, then quietly opened the door into Dr. Bob's office.

Dr. Bob was sitting at his desk, his arms across it and his head on his arms. There was a stillness about him, a look of having been motionless forever, that brought Eleanor to his side with one terrified dart. She seized his hands, and he looked up at her. His stillness was pain, not-what she had

That foolish joke had brought down crushingly on his head all the burden of all that waiting and hoping, and the eight of it took away every conscious thought in Eleanor save that the man she loved was suffering.

She took his hands in hers, whispering in a mechanical way: "Let me help. Let me help. Let me help." But she was scarcely aware of it.

Dr. Bob looked at her with light in his eyes. He laid his hands on her shoulders and gazed down at her with a face wise and loving.

"When the first patient comes," he said.

Eleanor decided against the new summer suit. She was saving very strenuously, for she had a purpose in view.

One day she counted her money. Then she put on her hat and went to call on a cousin. The cousin had married poor, had a swarm of children and was chronically ill. When Eleanor came away the cousin said she'd go to the doctor the next day and swore between kisses, hugs and tearful maunderings that she'd never, never tell who had sent her. The patient-the first patient-was to arrive the next day. The weather was the hot, soggy kind that enervates a spring feverish world in May. The saving that Eleanor had done had meant much overwork and late hours. She was physically at her limpest and nervously at her most uneven. She was haggard with anxiety and was made a coward by each footstep sounding near the door. The hour came for Rhoda, but no

Endea came with the nour. Eleahor watched eagerly from the window. And then she saw Rhoda at last.

Rhoda was stealing swiftly along the opposite side of the street, in her hand a big box containing the chief treasure from the window of a big milliner's store, the purse that had contained Eleanor's savings clutched as tightly in her hand as if it still had in it the money that had been tempted from Eleanor obeyed a blind impulse. With one reckless rush she left the office door and plunged into the stream of passing vehicles and across the street.

A moment later she was lying white on the pavement, blood trickling from her shoulder, and a crowd gathering about her and the panic stricken chauffeur whose machine had run her down. Then Dr. Bob was bending over her and raising her tenderly, lovingly, in loving, strong arms.

When she came to again she was lying on a couch in an operating room that was very familiar to her, with implements about her that she had cleaned herself day after day for the patients that never came.

She lay still and white till Dr. Edwards been to wonder at her slow recovery. He did not know what wondrous dreams had suddenly turned to ice that weighted and froze and broke her. But he did know that the pulse was gaining no strength, the cheeks were bloodless and the eyes listless and dull, and he did know that he would like to fling aside his remedies and try how kisses would redden the pale lips.

Then miraculously there was a wave of crimson over her face, her lips parted with the very breath of inspiration. her eyes burned victoriously, and Eleanor turned to him. She stretched up her arms to him irresistibly. "Your first patient! Your first patient! You have one now! Your promise, your promise!"

"But," said Dr. Bob when he was capable of recollecting anything, "it was to be my first pay patient."

Before he could prevent Eleanor lifted herself, bandaged shoulder and all, from the operating couch and stood before him more like Ulana triumphant than the pale creature who had lain there. She was counting the money in the purse at her girdle, but as she counted her face fell and despair again overcame her. Then-inspiration!

"With my professional percentage deducted!" she exclaimed and fell to counting again. But even now-must she lose? Then-inspiration again! "Will you take stamps?" she asked. laughing, embarrassed, holding out in a wondrously mixed handful the amount of the fee to Dr. Bob, helpless between love and laughter.

"Nellie, Nellie!" said Dr. Bob. Maggie in her excitement popped her head in without knocking. "It's from Mrs. Martin's-the rich Mrs. Martin's," she said breathlessly, "and she wants you immediate, sir."

He Fought With Mosby.

General von Massow, commanding the Ninth German army corps, in his younger years was a member of Mosby's guerrilla band. He came to this country in 1863, a young Prussian lieutenant of davalry seeking adventure and enlisted under Mosby. He was shot through the lungs in 1864 and eventually returned home to resume his army career.

Mechanical Cotton Picker.

Should a mechanical cotton picker, recently invented, prove practical it will revolutionize the industry in this country. It is a huge contrivance, driven by one man, much as an automobile is operated, and claim is made that it will pick 95 per cent of the cotton without injury to the unripe bolls or the plants.

PRACTICAL HEALTH HINT.

Convalescence.

Some persons find it hard to remember that every wise convalescende must be gradual. That is why a good nurse is almost as important during convalescence as during the real filness. We all have a healthy love of life, and we are never so conscious of life as we are when we have fust escaped from the threat of death. It is natural that our joy should express itself in efforts to do something to show that we are alive. That is especially true after an attack of typhoid fever. Typhoid usually lasts several weeks, and by the time convaloscene begins the patient is heartily tired of being an invalid and very likely to abuse his feeble, new born strength. A patient who is getting well of typhoid generally has a tremendons appetite, and unless he is careful to keep it within bounds he may have a relapse.

In convalescence from such disorders of the respiratory tract as pneumonia and bronchitis there is danger that the ever present germ of tuberculosis may gain a foothold, and after scarlet fever great care must be taken lest the kidneys become inflamed.

The way to avoid all these dangers is to make haste slowly. Unwillingness to remain a partial invalid for a few weeks has often caused lifelong invalidism. Therefore give up every kind of social excitement for a time, go to bed early and sleep late, take a nap every afternoon and follow absolutely your doctor's advice. That is the way to a safe and happy recovery.

Taking Warning.

Zoroaster, the revealer, visited the place of eternal fires. There, in a group of kings, he saw one with a single foot. He turned to the master.

"Why," he asked, "is the king mutilated?"

"In all his life," the mighty one replied, "he performed but one kind act. Seeing a camel tethered with so short a rope that it could not reach the trough in which its food was placed. this king kicked the vessel where the bungry one could feed from it. For this good deed his foot passed into heaven and the rest of him was thrown

Only Told the Truth. When he was a student at Heidelberg John Sharp Williams was regarded as having the most robust imagination in the student body. That truth is stranger than fiction, however, was proved one day at his boarding place, when the future United States senator chanced to describe the kind of potatoes he had been raised on in his native Mississippi. They were so unlike potatoes as the German people knew them that the whole proposition was beyond belief. Yet John Sharp had done nothing but describe the ordinary sweet potato of every day commerce. -New York Sun.

AN ARCTIC SOLOMON.

It Didn't Take Him Long to Reach a Sensible Conclusion.

The "floating court" is an institution founded by the United States government for administering judgment in the far north. An interesting example of the unusual problems that confronted Captain A. J. Henderson, one of the first judges of the court, is told by Mr. Walter Noble Burns in the Wide World Magazine:

One dar, at Point Hope, there appeared before the court held on the Thetis, Captain Henderson's ship, an old Eskime and his wife. They were accompanied by their pretty daughter and two stalwart young men, who were suitors for her hand. In choicest Eskimo that sounded like a series of explosions of vocal dynamite, the venerable father poured a voluble tale into the ears of the interpreter.

"This may, he say," began the interpreter, "these two feller want this gal for wife. One feller he offer a rifle, ten pound whalebone, six walrus tusk, a dog team and sled. The other feller, he give kayak, two reindeer, a bearskin and six fox skin. This gal the old man's only daughter. He old, and he want good trade. But he not know which he best take. He say maybe you tell him."

Captain Genderson is no Cupid—he stands six feet two and weighs 2.0 pounds-but he determined to essay the role of Cupid's first assistant.

"You love this girl?" he asked one "Yes," replied the interpreter, "he love her." "And do you love her?" the captain asked the other "Yes, he love her too."

The captain looked at the girl, who was a pretty little thing, something over four feet high, with coal black hair plastered down over her tempies. and sloe-black roguish eyes. Let no one doubt the vital beauty of Eskimo maids in the flush of youth and health.

"Here," said the captain to the girl, "which one of these men do you want?"

The interpreter put the question. The maiden's eyes grew brighter, her cheeks a deeper crimson and a coy smile wreathed her lips. She stepped ever to one of the young men unhesitatingly and touched him on the arm. "This one," she said, and there was no need for the interpreter to translate. "All right," said the captain, with a roar of laughter, "take him." And he married them on the spot.

Straight from the ship back to the village the newly wedded couple paddled. to set up housekeeping and to live happily, no doubt, ever afterward. The bride's father touched off a few more explosions of vocal dynamite into the Interpreter's ear.

"He say," declared the interpreter to Captain Henderson, "he satisfied."

Mr. Bowser Inquires

And Mrs. Bowser Promptly Replies.

By M. QUAD.

Copyright, 1914, by the McClure Newspaper Syndicate.

A block from his house, as he went home the other evening, Mr. Bowser stopped at his family drug store. He had been feeling unusually good all day, but all at once his right ear began to twitch.

Was it the forerunner of paralysis? Was he going deaf?

Did St. Vitus' dance begin this way? He thanked heaven that he was so close to first aid, and he entered the stere and said to the druggist as carelessly as he could:

"Doc. I have got a queer twitching of the ear."

"Yes?" "Is it a warning of anything serious ?"

"It wouldn't be in the summer, but it may be now."

"What do you mean?" "Why, you want to eat a bull thistle to cure that twitching, and where are you going to get one now?"

Mr. Bowser backed out of the store with a very purple face, and as he stood on the corner for a minute he said to himself:

"He meant that I was a jackass, and Mrs. Bowser shall pay for this!"

Mrs. Bowser was in the hall to welcome him, but he hung up his hat and turned on her with:

"Woman, why don't you gather up all the sheets and blankets and coats and hats in the house and hang them on this hall tree and make a regular May pole of it?"

"I HAVE A QUEER TWITCHING OF THE

There was only one extra hat on the tree and that belonged to Mr. Bowser, and he had hung it there, but Mrs. Bowser was too politic to dispute him. She led the way to the dining room, and he scuffled along after her, every footstep showing that he was out of sorts and meant to raise a row. Before sitting down to the table he look ed around, and his eye happened to no tice a crack in the glass over one of the pictures. With a scowl he exclaimed:

"Been at work with the ax again, have you? Why didn't you smash the whole of 'em while you were about it?" Mr. Bowser had cracked the glass himself a month before, but why say eo and hear him deny it? He fell into his chair at the table with a growl, and es Mrs. Bowser had planned an extra good dinner, she hoped the worst had passed. It hadn't even begun, how ever.

"What have you got here-an old boot?" he demanded, as he started to carve the chicken and stopped with knife and fork held aloft.

"It's a young and tender chicken-one of the nicest I could buy," she humbly replied.

"Chicken, eh? Well, I never should have believed it!"

It was a dinner fit for any man to sit down to, but Mrs. Bowser realized that she would only make the matter worse by argument and therefore held her peace.

Mrs. Bowser had intended to ask him to take her to the theater that evening, but seeing how "off" he was, she gave it up, and, on returning to the sitting room sat down to a book, while he picked up his newspaper. Mr. Bower didn't mean to give it up that way, however, and after glancing over the paper, he suddenly demanded: "Mrs. Bowser, is this a house or a wigwam?

"Why, what do you mean?" "Just what I said, If it's a house then we need a housekeeper. If it's a wigwam, or a hole in the ground, or an Eskimo's hut, then you are running it bangup. Last night, Mrs. Bowser, last night, when I went to put on my nightshirt it was not to be found. I presume it had gone down to the cook to be used as a mop or, perhaps, you had flung it out of the window for the hildren to play horse with. An Eskimo or a digger Indian might put up With such things, but I can't get used to 'em. Can you spare the time to tell me where that night shirt went to?" "It was rolled up and placed under your pillow, and I found it there this morning." she replied. He knew it as well as she did, as he saw it when he got up. The fact was forgot to change, but he must hold some one to blame, and why not her?

"There is another thing that I wish to speak of, now that I happen to think of it. Most women pride themselves on the smallness and trimness of their feet. You seem to have no pride in that direction. If your feet have splattered all over the house I am not going to blame you, but if it's only the way you wear your shoes then I'll lend you a pair of mine to reduce the size."

"You see those shoes?" she queried as she pushed out her feet. "Well, they cost $2.50, and I have worn them for six months. During that time you have had three pairs of five dollar shoes, but you can't afford better for me. While other ladies won't look at shoes at less than $6, I must look for a price to fit a working girl. If you will kindly lend me a pair of your shoes I will be ever so much obliged." That was another on Mr. Bowser. and he turned red and white and waited two or three minutes before saying:

"I was looking in the directory today to see if there was such a place in town as a sock asylum-a sort of home where men can go and get their socks darned. I have a dozen pairs, but all are out at the heels. Perhaps you know of some such asylum?"

Mrs. Bowser made no reply; but, going upstairs to his dresser, she brought down eight pairs of socks which were in perfect condition and laid them before him.

"Y-e-s," said Mr. Bowser, pretending not to see. "There is another thing I should like to mention, I gave you money only last week to buy coal, and I want to know"-

"I bought coal," she interrupted. "and it will last us three or four weeks

"But what about the gas bill, Mrs. Bowser. We have the patent tips, warranted to save, at least half the gas, and yet the bill for the last month

"Was $2 less, Mr. Bowser. There it is, as you can see for yourself."

She had him on that, and he real ized that he was getting the worst of it. He therefore rose up and said:

"Mrs. Bowser, I did intend to spend a pleasant evening at home; but, being, as you seem, bound and determined to spoil it, I will go out and pass three or four hours at the club. Just go to bed whenever you 'wish, and don't mind me. When a busband has no home, you know-when his wife isn't willing to make things pleasant for him-when-when"-

And he put on his overcoat and hat and went out and walked up and down and shivered and then loafed for half an hour in a drug store and then talked politics with the butcher until his toes were frostbitten, and as he finally started for home he congratulated himself that he had taught Mrs. Bowser a lesson she would not soon forget and upheld his authority as lord and master.

An Antediluvian Yarn.

Professor William Lyon Phelps of Yale at a recent banquet told a tale of the Englishman and his sense of humor: Professor Phelps and a friend, traveling in the west, had been discussing the time honored subject. Professor Phelps' friend pointed to an Englishman who sat near by. Whereupon he accosted the Englishman and told him a truly sidesplitting yarn. But the subject of their discussion never moved a muscle.

"Come," said the American, somewhat testily; "you'll laugh at that next summer."

The Englishman removed his monocle gently. "I think not," he said. "Why not?"

"I laughed at that last summer."-Boston Traveler.

PRACTICAL HEALTH HINT.

Diet For Diabetes.

Dr. Marcel Labbe recommends as a diet for diabetics food distributed about as follows: Dry vegetables (peas, beans and lentils), 300 grams; butter, 150 grams; five or six eggs; five or six aleurone biscuits or thirty grams of gluten bread. The butter is used with the vegetables; the eggs may be cooked to suit the patient's taste. This is a ration for one day and is to be continued three or four days. The Journal of the American Medical Association remarks that this "is by no means an inanition diet, since it furnishes on an average 120 to 140 grams of protein, 130 to 170 grams of fat and 170 to 190 grams of starch."

SEEKING BIG TREES.

If You Locate the Right Ones You Can Win a Cash Prize.

The American Genetic association of Washington has offered two prizes of $100 each for two photographs-one of the largest trees of a nut bearing variety, such as the chestnut, oak, walnut, butternut or pecan and one of the largest broad leaf tree that does not bear edible seeds, such as the elm, birch, maple, cottonwood and tulip poplar. The contest closes on July 1, 1915. The association does not want photographs of cone bearing trees, for it is well known the big trees of California have no rivals. The object of the competition is to find out in what regions the native trees attain their largest growth and under what conditions they thrive best. When the situation of these large trees is learned the measurements will be verified. Then the association will try to get seeds, cuttings or grafting wood from especially thriving trees in the region with which to experiment in other parts of the country. If there is anything in heredity in treesa question that the experiments will do something to answer-the association may be able to establish some especially choice strains of native trees in regions that now lack good speciriens. The investigation may also belp to determine whether trees can be acclimatized. Trees sometimes grow better in new places than they do in their native region. That is true of some of the Australian eucalypts, and the Monterey pine flourishes better in New Zealand, it is said, than it does in its native California.-Youth's Compan-

CONDENSED RATIONS.

The Kind the British Soldier Carries

when in the r Each British soldier on active service carries in his kit a small package containing what is known as an "emergency ration. The "emergency ration" is wrapped in a small package. When the emergency arises the center band of the package is torn off and two small tin cans are disclosed. One can contains a quarter of a pound of concentrated beef and the other the same quantity of cocoa paste. The combination of the two foods is sufficient to maintain the strength of the average man for thirty-six hours if consumed in small quantities. The beef and the cocoa paste may be aten dry, but greater flavor is gained without loss of nourishment if the beef is allowed to simmer in water over a fire and the cocoa paste made into cocoa. The amount of beef in the tin will make two quarts of beef tea and the cocoa paste can be converted into the same quantity of cocoa.-New Giant Locomotives. At present the largest locomotive reported to be in use is a huge compound engine which measures 120 feet over all and weighs 850,000 pounds. It is an oil burner and carries 4,000 gallons of oil and 12,000 gallons of water. It cost $43,380 to build. These giants have reached a point where one locomotive is so long that it is hinged in the middle with a flexible joint so that it can turn a curve without upsetting.

Aeroplane Propellers.

The propellers of aeroplanes such as are used in the present European war may be made of selected ash, which is both strong and light and will not split under vibration or shock, or of built up layers of spruce with mahogany centers. The framework of the machines, too, is generally made of wood, spruce being much used on account of its straight grain and freedom from hidden defects.

Curious Family Complication. Details of a curious family complication come from St. Gall, Switzerland. A naturalized Swiss citizen, German by birth, is married to a Hungarian. His brother-in-law is fighting against the Servians and the husband of his sister-in-law is fighting against the Austrians. Of the man's two brothers one is in a Prussian regiment and the other is serving France under Gen-

Talking about business, saying business is good,—that everything is all right, -Charitable institutions and labor bureaus | Waverley Congregational church. are packed with men seeking work, unless daily reports in the metropolitan papers are untrue. This would not be the con- gian relief steamship was completed and dition if business was not at a partial the "Harpalyce," as the ressel is named, standstill. And the worst of it is that is now a considerable distance on her this is sure to continue until in some way | way to the destined port, with a cargo espublic confidence is restored. There are timated at eight thousand tons. Some of all sorts of reasons advanced as to what the items making up this total are 6295 has paralyzed business, but there is no tons of wheat, 1135 tons of flour, 16 tons sense in blinding one's eyes to the fact of rice, 200 tons of canned goods, 160 tons that the attitude of the present national of beans, 150 tons of rolled oats, quantiadministration, voiced by the President ties of clothing, etc. It is sad that this when taking office, and illustrated by the relief should be called for, but it is splenaction of Congress, thoroughly scared the | did that distress has received such prompt business interests of the country and that and generous response to its call. "scare" still holds with some of the largest business concerns. The successful business always has its foundation in public confidence. When that has returned, our railroads will be doing a profitable business, because the wheels of industry are turning.

Some may think that a big matter like this is out of place in the columns of a country weekly, but we think every one should consider the matter seriously and a better performance of her present oblicarefully. Of course big business is the gations, wherein the community has a big factor in national life, but big as the biggest business ever was or will be, it is not equal in volume to the smaller units in business that make up the grand total of the wealth of town, city, state or nation, and when grave questions of policy enter the arena of politics, these units outnumber those grouped with larger enterprises in tremendous proportion. The real statesman realizes this, and this is the reason why, in dealing with questions of revenue, he frames legislation on broad- relief obtained was only temporary, give to the foreign rival the market that one and the patient rallied satisfactorily, should be supplied by home industries.

To a large extent, this has been done by the changes made in tariff laws by the party majority in Congress. Here lies that must continue until business can adjust itself to the new conditions, or quit. Hardly less harmful has been the way the interstate commerce commission has treated the railroads. To "visit the sins of the fathers upon the children" would seem to be the purpose, rather than the cated in Arlington schools and the Acadstraightening out of tangled conditions and giving adequate compensation for service rendered. It would seem to reincreased cost of transportation must be met by charges to cover that increase, but the appeal of the railroads have so far fallen on deaf ears, and one of the dissolved, and Mr. Bailey was then offimight-be chief sources of wealth to the ciating as superintendent of the factory country is itself one of the heaviest burden bearers under things as they now exist. The Post Office has burdened the Capital, Mr. Bailey was among the first roads with the carrying of parcel post matter at a price admitted to be unremunerative, and then boasts of having a shared in all the movements and engage surplus in the treasury. A tremendously expensive "valuation of railroad properties" is still going on "to establish a basis of tariff charges," to be determined no one knows when, with the almost certainty that when the figures are tabulated elected to this office and served three they will not form a basis of an equitable rate, for dividends are paid on capitalization, not on valuation. These are matters | board | rendered six | years of | continuous in a community like the one we serve.

James Alderson Bailey was born in Bermingham, England, the son of James A. E. and Esther Johnson Bailey, but at the age of two years he was brought to this country by his parents, his father having formed a connection with Welsh & Griffiths, who introduced saw making in America. Young Mr. Bailey was edu emy at Lexington, then entered the employ of the saw making firm (was admitted to partnership in 1863) and when we came to Arlington, in 1874, had personal quire no argument to prove that greatly charge of the most delicate operation in saw making-the tempering of the great discs of steel that were finally turned out to saw logs three feet in diameter. team having Hicks, Hutchinson. Clifford, Robbins and Osgood of the B. A. A. Frost of last year's Dartmouth team. Clarence Wanamaker scored all three goals for the victors, while Osgood and Lowe scored for Arlington. "Bulger" Lowe, the Exeter phenom, made three rushes down the rink in the last half that lineup and summary:—
were wonderful. The Melrose team WANDERER A. A played wonderful hockey and forced the play throughout. Jones made several good advances, but the Arlington outer works stopped him. C. Wanamaker's weaving in and out resulted in one of the goals and the second goal he made by carrying the disc close to the net carching Buttrick, who had figured in the Princeton and Aggies match, off guard and driving the rubber home. Osgood scored the first goal for Arlington High, but in the last half he and his mates found trouble invading Melrose's territory because of a three-man defense being stacked up in front of them. THE AWAKENED VILLAGE

The Bell and the Clock.

Close beside our ancient highway, Follen Church stands old and gray, There the people of the village Worship God each Sabbath-Day;

Novel both in form and structure, Planned by him whose name it bears, Serving well the goodly number, Seeking faith for doubts and cares.

In its towar far stretching skyward, Hangs aloft its deep-toned bell. Ringing out its call to worship, Loud and clear o'er mount and dell;

Sounding, also, more and evening Daily calls to work and rest, Prompting all to useful service, Whosoe'er with strength are blessed.

Long it kept its watchful virgil, O'er the village restful grown, 'Til a new and strong arousing, Seemed to pass from home to home;

Gladly, then, the bell high swinging Did the joyous tidings send, For it knew the changes, coming, Would great help, its service, lend.

While the later months flew swiftly, Each left something of its store, 'Til our village boasts imprevements, Such as few had dreamt before.

Dana Homestead for our old folks. Who their own loved homes have lost. Adams's School with children's play-ground, Well designed and worth its cost;

And the Mount above the village, Rich by nature's hand bestowed, Now we reach with ease and pleasure, By the new-built 'Follen Road."

Still on-coming are the changes, Which hereafter none may block, And to-night we here are gathered, To install a village clock;

High above us in the tower, Wedded to its clear-toned bell, Shall the brightly lighted time-piece, Day and night its message tell.

May the hours it calmly measures,
Bring to all both health and cheer, Teach us love of God and country,

Conquer hate and banish fear. Let this be the New Year's promise Which the Clock and Bell recall

Fellowship and kindly services We will render each to all. EDWIN A. BAYLEY

One of the delightful events of the evening was the opportunity for Mrs. Fred B. Thompson of Arlington to meet a large number of her former pupils when she laught in the l'eabody school in Cambridge. The bride and groom of half a decade were the reipients of many appropriate presents with abundant good wishes.

> . One of the most popular and best patronized annual social events held north of Boston, was the New Year's Eve dinner-dance, given by the Belmont Spring Country Club. About three hundred niembers and guests filled the club house to its utmost capacity and it will be necessary that the call for extensions be given tousideration the coming year. Among those present were parties from Winchester, Arlington, Somerville, Cambridge, Medford, Boston, Brookline, Waltham, Newton, Belmont, Waverley, Watertown and Lexington.

. Carroll Fiske, of Wakefield, a memher of the Medford Boat Club, started his boat Venture for the first time last Sunday afternoon on upper Mystic lake. The Venture was raced on the Hudson iver last year and was the property of Vincent Astor. From now on races will e held Saturdays and Sundays, and three liver trophies will be given to the high oint winners. A novelty sail-skating race, open to anyone, will be held over a hree-cornered course at upper Mystic on next saturday afternoon. It will be conducted under the rules of the American Racing Association. Last year a similar vent attracted skaters from many secions of New England.

*.* The dancing class at the Belmont Spring Country Club has been received with great favor by the members and is eing held every Friday night. It is intended to run these classes all winter, if sufficient numbers turn out. On Christmas day, Mr. R. B. Sherburne, of Lexington, had a large party of friends and re atives at the club, as did Mr. E. P. Brown of Newton. After dinner the tables were cleared away and they danced until toldnight.

MISS EDNA HOYT COASTING.

Old Boreas has been asleep for a long time, but now his nap is over. Boreas, you know, is the North Wind, and Jack Frost is his son. When Boreas wakes up be sends Jack out to let people know that cold weather is on the way. Jack Frost is quite gentle when he starts out on his tour. He breathes on the flowers and trees and grass, and soon they go to sleep until spring shall awaken them. Then old Boreas opens his mouth and blows a tremendous blast. That is how winter begins Snow and ice take the places of flowers and green trees. Little folks, how ever, are glad when Boreas wakes up. for he makes was of splendid sport. Without the snow and ice there would be no skating or locating-about the jolliest kind of fun there is. Here is the picture of a little girl who was caught by the photographer as she was coasting down a hillside in Central park, New York city. Her name is Edna Hoyt, and she is having a glorious time. Snow brings joy to thousands of kiddles all over this country and in others far away, although the war has saddened the winter for many Fortune Telling Game.

Write on slips of paper the fortune. of which some samples will be given below, and place them in walnut shells, out of which the nut has been taken Paste the two half shells together, and when your "party" is seated around the festive board hand them around. Here are a few fortunes:

"You will hold a public position in the community in which you live." "Your lot is to bear other people's burdens. Your belpmate will share your troubles with you."

"One year of your life will be spent in poverty. All the others will be prosperous.' "You will marry a person of good gamily, fine appearance and extraordinary ability.

"Few sorrows will come to you, but much happiness will be your lot through life."

"Your relatives will envy you your fine helpmate and lovely family."

"Your life will be a continuous climb. You will have ambition for your watchword "

Game For Boy Scouts.

The game of "spot your staves" is played in the same way as an ordinary paper chase, except that the hares are provided with a number of small circular guimmed labels, such as are used by shopkeepers for marking the prices on goods.

Every time the trail is dropped not more than two labels should be dropped with it As soon as the trail is picked up by a bound he blows his whistle. The other hounds immediately proceed to the spot and search for the two labels. When found they should be stuck on to the finder's staff, and at the end of the chase the scout with the most labels wins.

This tends to keep up the interest of the smaller scouts, who otherwise would soon be inclined to lag behind.-Scout.

Weather Vanes.

I've counted seven cows,

Our town is full of weather vanes That glitter in the sun: I've watched them often windy days As round and round they've spun. There's one small eagle; there's a horse

And ships with golden sails all set, And little shining prows cometimes they nardly move a bit, All pointing to the west,

Or else the east or north or south, Just where the wind thinks best. I 'magine when I wake at night And hear a creaking vane,

Perhaps it wants to rest and so It's trying to complain. Some day, when there's a splendid sun And wind to blow and blow,

HOW SHOT ARE MADE.

And Why the Pure Lead Has to Be Tempered With Tin.

The manufacture of shot, described by O. C. Horn in Forest and Stream. requires a high tower, a perforated pan. a tank of water and "tempered" lead. Shot are made by dropping molten ead from a high point to the earth The lead forms into globules just as the rainitrops do when they fall from the clouds. Ordinarily we do not real ize that raindrops are little spheres. but under the proper conditions they freeze, and we have hallstones, which may be called shot made of ice. In the making of shot pure lead is melted and mixed with a "temper" that consists mainly of tin, and then poured into a perforated pan or sieve The perforations vary according to the size of the shot to be made

A temper is mixed with the lead in order to make the globules form when the lead falls. If pure lead were used it would fall in the form of little bars instead of round shot

In order that the globiles may have plenty of time to form the lead must fall a long distance, and so towers are built. The towers used to be made as high as 200 feet and even more, but modern towers are rarely over 150 feet.

The perforated pan into which the molten lead is poured is at the top of the tower, and the globules of lead fall through the perforations into tanks of water at the bottom of the tower. The water cools them and also prevents them from flattening out, as they would if they fell on a solid floor.

From the water the shot go to steam driers. After drying the perfect shot are separated from the imperfect by means of glass tables inclined enough so that the shot when poured on at one end of the table, will roll to the other end At the farther end of the table are two gutters side by side The im perfect shot roll slowly and with diffi culty, so that they have not enough momentum to carry them beyond the first gutter. The perfectly round shot roll easily and swiftly, and when they reach the foot of the table they jump nimbly across the first gutter and land in the second.

After separation the perfect shot are polished by rolling in plumbago, and workmen then put them in bags for shipment or send them direct to the cartridge tilling department to be load ed into shells

HAT'S MADE AT NIGHT.

Sunshine Makes the Straw For Pana mas Too Brittle to Work.

Genuine Panama hats are made in Ecuador to a larger extent than in any other country, and the process of man ufacture is still not generally known The chief centers of the hat industry in the order of their importance ar Monticristi and Jipijapa, in the prov ince of Manavi; Santa Rosa and to a limited extent in Guayaquil and Cu enca. Thousands of natives of both sexes are employed at weaving these hats The work is carried on from a little after midnight to 7 o'clock in the morning, while the atmosphere is hu mid, for the straw becomes brittle dur ing the day and cannot then be han dled.

After much preliminary preparation the straw is very finely divided into the required widths by the nail of the little finger or thumb. A bunch of straw is bound in the middle and placed on the center of a wooden mold. the straws arranged radially and equal ly distant from each other in pairs. The plaiting begins at the apex of the crown and continues round and round until the bat is finished, care being taken that no straws are added while the crown is being made. Other straws, however, are added while the brim and border are being formed On the degree of nicety with which the straws are lengthened depends the beauty and durability of the hat Should a strand be broken it can be replaced and so plaited as not to be no

The finishing touches are put on by trimming the brim, edging the border and neatly fastening all projecting ends of the straws so as to be invisible The hat is washed in clean, cold water, coated with a thin solution of gum and polished with dry sulphur .-Argonaut.

Venetian Coffee.

In the year 1591 a Venetian doctor introduced coffee berries from Egypt. taught his countrymen how to crush them and brew the beverage, and the use of coffee soon became general-so much so, in fact, that Venice was full of coffee houses where the people idled away their days drinking the aromatic beverage. A peculiarity of the Venetian coffee houses was that their pa trons did not pay for each cup of cof fee they drank, but settled their hills for all the coffee consumed at the end of each year. The regular price of a cup of coffee was 5 soldi, about 21/2 cents

GREAT DRYDOCKS.

Where the Largest Warships Can Be Repaired In Safety.

HUGE BASINS OF CONCRETE.

Into These the Vessels Are Floated and Shored Up as the Gates Are Closed and the Water Pumped Out-Floating Docks and How They Are Used.

There is no such thing as a perfect anti-fouling composition, and probably there never will be.

By "anti-fouling" we mean a solu tion which, applied to the bottom of a ship, will keep her clean for an indefinite period

True, vessels can now keep the sea for months on end without getting foul enough to seriously diminish their speed, but in the long run their bot toms become weed grown, and they are obliged to go into drydock and be scraped and cleaned and repainted.

In old days, when warships were no larger than the steam launches which now hang on a Dreadnought's davits, the seamen did this work themselves. They ran the galley on to some convenient beach, hauled her out, tipped her on one side on the sand, scraped her and caulked her seams.

Even in the eighteenth century Captain Cook "careened" his vessel in a tidal creek on the Australian coast and did necessary repairs. The enormous warships of today require very different handling, and it is for their use that dockyards are fitted with "dry' or "graving" docks of vast dimen-

A drydock is a huge basin excavated in the ground. It is lined first with masonry of immense thickness, and this in turn is coated with thousands of tons of concrete.

The first great requisite of a dry dock is to be dry, and as it is always cut in low, swampy ground, with the bottom far below low tide mark, this is the great difficulty before its build

The bottom is quite flat. The sides run up in steps-enormous steps, each about a yard high, not the sort of stair case to run down in a hurry.

These steps are known as "altars," and they have two separate purposesfirst for supporting the workmen's scaffolds, the second and more important for the fixing of the "shores." Shores are the great balks of timber which hold a vessel upright in drydock

A drydock does not usually open straight out of the sea or harbor. More often there is a wet dock between The reasons are that a vessel can then be docked at any state of the tide and also that there is less pressure on the great watertight gates of the drydock.

The actual process of docking in dry dock is simple enough. The drydock is filled with water, the ship is floated in, the gates close behind her; then the water is pumped out by means of powerful steam pumps.

Along the bottom of the dock runs in a straight line a row of keel blocks on which the keel of the vessel rests. As the water is pumped away an army of workmen fix the shores in position.

This is a task which requires great care. Not so very long ago an 8,000 ton cruiser which was being drydocked at one of the southern dockyards in England was so carelessly shored up that she slipped and toppled over.

The damage was appalling. The hull of the ship was badly injured. It cost many thousands of pounds to repair

There are also floating graving docks There is one at Portsmouth with an area of two and one-quarter acres and a lifting capacity of 32,000 tons. It is emptied at will. It was invented by George Rennie in 1866. By means of a floating dock a large warship can be stitute for hard in frying. These can raised high and dry within three hours.

Using Leftovers For Supper.

Supper is the meal at which the ca pable housekeeper may show her ability in using up leftovers. If she is clev er she may provide appetizing sur prises, which generally do not require much material or time, says the Unit ed States department of agriculture It is mistaken economy to add a good deal of expensive materials in order to use up things of little value or to attempt fussy dishes that require long preparation. As far as everyday supper is concerned, it is usually good policy to avoid elaborate dishes and let the most of the time and strength expended for such things go to the main meal of the day. This is especially true where the women of the family do all the work.

In many families supper includes one hot dish and a second course of preserves and cocoa. Here, as at breakfast, some kind of bread, with bufter the meal, with an appetizing dish of eggs, meat, cheese or vegetables.

While noon dinner and supper are the rule in most rural districts and smaller communities, in other parts of the country, as every one knows, lunch and evening dinner take their place, as is inevitable where the wage earners must be away from home all day long. In such cases what has been said about supper applies to lunch. If some of the family carry their lunch away with them, bread and butter again form the usual basis of the meal, with cold meat, hard boiled eggs or some other appetizing as well as nutritious food and perhaps fruit and cake to complete and vary it.

Desserts Are an Economy When no dessert is provided a greater quantity of meat and vegetables must be eaten to satisfy the demands of nature. For some this is all right. but for the majority of people a certain amount of sugar and starch is necessary in the food. Children should not be deprived of this kind of food. It is economical to provide a dessert even if a simple une. In arranging for a dinner, plan a light dessert when the rest of the meal is to be substantial. When the main part of the dinner is to be light let the dessert be hot and substantial.

and the Appendix. Run your foretinger around the rim of each ear. You are almost sure to find in one of them and quite possibly in both a tiny hard lump.

It is only a relic of the days when. innumerable hundreds of centuries ago. man was only one of the animals of the wild and had a pointed ear, like a wolf's or dog's.

What good is the little furrow that runs down from the nose to the middle of the upper lip? None. But it. too, has a history It is a legacy from the time when the human upper lip was in two parts-a hare lip, like that of the rat tribe. The split has healed up long ago, but the new skin is so recent in the history of the race that hair refuses to grow on that furrow

When a tly settles on you anywhere can you serenely twitch that patch of skin and shake him off? Probably not But once these old skin muscles, now almost dead after centuries of clothes wearing, were as active as those of a horse. A few-a very few-people can twitch their ears like a dog and do so instinctively when startled, and cases do occasionally occur in which the scalp can be moved at will.

In one very interesting case mention ed in medical books the man could hurl books a couple of yards away and a hot beverage, forms the basis of simply by twitching the muscles on the top of his head; but, generally speaking, our skin muscles are even more dead nowadays than our ear muscles. We've neglected them. The only set still in use are those we employ when we want to raise our eyebrows.

The large intestine, too, is a thing we really don't need nowadays. The many coils of this long tube are, according to the doctors, quite unnecessary, now mankind has become a flesh eating animal, and merely provide a resting place for germs. Surgeons have often out out a few odd coils and stitched the ends together. We don't really need to carry a great intestine

Another thing we don't need much nowadays is the instinct to walk on bands and fect together. You think walking upright the only natural way for man? It isn't. If ever you have to make your way along some narrow plank or some narrow, dizzy mountain ledge, you will find the old instinct strong in you.-Philadelphia North

A MAN AND HIS WORK.

Without Interest In the Task Efficiency is Never Attained. A man's luck is as hard as adamant if he is not in love with the work he does as with a maid he woos. It is a miserable thing to care for one's occupation merely because it shuts out the "thoughts that burn like irons if you think." Any trade or profession you could name is a poor affair if it is but a time killer, a stop gap, an opiate, the ballast of the dirigible life. You hear a man start his work with a faint tap at a clock stroke, and you hear him drop it with a loud thud at another clock stroke, and you know his soul in Washington as to the "why" of the and his brain are not alive in the thing that he is doing. #### LIVE LIFE PRESERVERS.

Canaries In Coal Mines and White Mice in Submarines.

In coal mining the great danger to rescue parties, after a disaster from firedamp within the mine, has been that there has been no known way of detecting when the rescuers are within the danger zone of the deadly gases until it was too late-until the rescuers suddenly tumbled over, unconscious and dying from the deadly fumes. For the gas is odorless and tasteless, and there is no known chemical method of detection.

But some one discovered that the canary-the ordinary little yellow singing bird-was peculiarly susceptible to the effects of this gas. For four or five minutes before the gas reached a strength sufficient to overcome human beings the little canary birds toppled off their perches, insensible. Accordingly, all rescue parties that now enter the coal mines carry with them several of these little life preservers in wire cages. These they closely watch as they make their way into the dangerous sections of the mine, and as soon as one of the little feathered singers becomes insensible they seek safety at once. Not, however, before they have transferred the little fellow into a cage charged with life giving oxygen, which immediately restores him to his former well being, for they are gratefully mindful of their debt to him.

In the submarines of our navy a deadly gas is formed that affects the occupants much as the gas in coal mines affects the miners and rescuers -and is equally difficult of detection. In this case some one discovered that the white mice, especially the breed called "dancing mice" that may be seen in any animal dealer's shop, were as susceptible to this deadly gas as the little canaries were to the coal mine gas. Accordingly, every submarine now carries as an essential part of its equipment a cage of these little dancers. When the boat is running beneath the surface-which is the time and condition when the deadly gas is formed, due to the action of the chemicals used in operating the boat-these little mice are carefully watched. When one of them is overcome the boat either rises to the surface and pumps in a supply of fresh air or, if that is impossible, oxygen is liberated from the liberal supply of tanks carried on board until the mouse revives. The oxygen is then cut off, for an oversupply of it is likely to work harm among the human beings compelled to breathe it too freely.-New York Post.

ELECTION DATE PUZZLE.

Why the "First Tuesday After the First Monday in November?

Nearly all the American world knows that the national election and nearly all of the state elections occur on the first Tuesday after the first Monday in November, but probably not one in all the millions of voters and nonvoters can tell "why" that date was selected for the choice of electors. The "when" is easy of discovery, but that is another story. It is always the first Tuesday after the first Monday, but anybody who looks at the calendars of several years in November will see that the date varies almost every year.

Years ago the writer inquired of many of the most learned congressmen mystery. Not one could answer except to say, "Bless me, I don't know." Harry Smith, who for long years was journal clerk of the house of representatives, was almost a magician in dragging to light those little mysteries associated with the history of the country. He sought high and low as to the "why" actually for months and then

It is really one of the curiosities of our national legislation. H. H. B. Meyer, chief bibliographer of the Congressional library, says: "As to why the first Tuesday after of the first Tuesday in November was fixed for the date of presidential elections, we have to report that no satisfactory answer can be given."-E. W.

Geranium Luncheon.

The most stunning dinner or luncheon table imaginable is achieved when red geraniums are used exclusively as decoration. Nearly every one can obtain these brilliant flowers, and they are usually at their brightest when other blossoms in the window garden are on the wane.

Fill a large glass bowl with the scarlet posies, using their own rich leaves for the green. Red candles in holders of glass, scarlet paper bonbon and nut boxes, with ribbons of the same hue leading to the place cards, which should be white with a red geranium thrust through the corner should be adopted.

The hostess should be gowned in white, with red sash, flowers and slippers, or the dress may be of red muslin with white accessories.

First serve a cherry cocktail, then tomato bouillon, salmon croquettes with Julienne potatoes, beet salad and raspberry sherbet. The cakes may be iced in red. as there are harmless fruit colorings. A confectioner will make cream patties to match in coloring if the order is given a few days

Smart Stationery.

Pure white is the most elegant style of stationery, especially for an elderly woman. For the debutante a tinted paper is in very good taste. This comes in pale salmon, oyster blue and dresden. Well in from the edge of the sheet and envelope runs a fine hair line in a darker shade to harmonize with the lighter tint. For instance, the salmon paper has a dull rose line and the oyster blue a cadet blue hair line.

Formerly a monogram was engraved in a corresponding-shade in the corner of the sheet, but fashion no longer decrees this.

The correspondence paper for an older woman is more than ever elaborate this year. One style in pale French gray, with a heavy monogram in silver and black, is decidedly distinctive. Likewise a natural colored oak with a dull brown and gold monogram, or perhaps the shaded tints of lavender and violet, with a two tone silver monogram, are in good taste for a woman who wishes something that will truly bespeak her personality.

Restaurant Etiquette.

There should be no conspicuous conduct in a dining room of a hotel or a public restaurant. Do not talk or laugh in a loud tone. Do not dispute with the waiter. Do not look around at other guests in an impertinent manner. Eat slowly, act with refinement and remember that you are in a public place. The restaurant is indeed a great test of the true lady and gentle-

The end of the meal should be followed by your exit from the dining room. The lady precedes the gentleman on leaving the restaurant. At the door the gentleman will receive his hat, which has been taken from him on entering. Here there is a call for a lift the mattress in the middle, tilting tip of 10 cents if it be a restaurant of a large hotel and if the stay be just for one meal. There is much protest against this and the concerted action of men is doing much toward minimizing this "holdup."

Privacy For Guests.

When the guest room has an occupant the children of the household should consider it sacred and should never be allowed to enter or even to knock at its door without first consulting an older head.

Even a hostess sometimes spoils the pleasure of the loveliest of guest chambers by entering it too frequently with inquiries, etc.

Over entertainment is really worse than none at all. One may assume that a guest may perhaps want to be alone when she seeks her room.

When Women Call.

Ceremonious calls are not made between women in the morning, evening or on Sunday afternoons. A man, owing to the exactions of business, may call in the evening and on Sunday aft-

A woman should never call on a man socially. A business errand is the only occasion for a call from a woman to a man, and in such a case the lady calls during his business hours and sends in her name, not her visiting card.

Taking French Leave.

If you are unexpectedly obliged to leave a town where you have been entertained without returning any calls send back a card to those to whom you are indebted. Take your visiting card and write "P. P. C." on it, which is the French for "Pour prendre conge" and means "to take leave." Send these cards by post to all those to whom you owe calls. This will show that you are not unmindful of them and were prevented from calling.

Matching Partners.

A good way to match partners at ny social affair is the following: Get two kinds of a variety of caudies—say two caramels, two chocolate drops, two peppermint sticks, two gumdrops, two butter scotches, etc. Pass one plate to the men and one to the women, and when candies are matched partners will be found. Another good way is to match flowers or animal crackers.

BLACK FOR EVENING.

Gowns For: Festive Occasions Fashioned of This Somber Color.

BLACE EVENING GOWN.

Never has the black evening gown been so popular for both old and young. Fashion, owing to the influence of Paris, continues her allegiance to somber shades. The fascinating evening frock bere pictured is of black satin. Over the satin fall three tunics of accordion plaited net. A novel feature of the frock is the wide girdle, simulating a basque. This girdle is of dull gold net set with jet ornaments. The simple little bodice is of black velvet, a material that brings out to perfection the delicate tints of the skin.

AIRING BED CLOTHES.

Sunshine For Both Sides of the Mat-

Many housekeepers think they air beds by throwing the bedclothes over the foot of the bed and the mattress over them, but this is simply airing the underside of the mattress and smothering the bedclothes.

Some persons also think that to air a bed properly it must lie this way about half the day, giving a very un tidy appearance to the room.

The proper way to air a bed, if bed clothes are not removed from the bed and placed on chairs, is to throw them over the footboard across a chair placed to keep them off the floor and then it up so that air passes under and over it. One-half hour of this will thoroughly air a bed, the windows to be open all the time, of course.

Air and sunshine are the best puriflers on the market, and they are also the cheapest. If sufficiently used they are enough to meet the need of a healthy family.

Air the closets and wardrobes just as you do the room. They are full of clothes that have been worn all day, which need airing.

Cleaning Pots and Pans.

Keep at hand a small quantity of coarse cornmeal or coarse wheat bran, and when cleaning greasy cooking utensils rub a handful in the pan, kettle or skillet. You will be surprised how clear of grease it will leave the utensil. Wash it then in good soapy water, scald and set to air before putting away. If one keeps chickens the meal thus used is excellent in their mash feed. If not, fold in a waste paper and burn. This way keeps the sink clean and saves much hard work.

rystal net over white satin. Narrow, clinging lines of the middle iges are most in favor for evening

Many evening gowns have no sleeves, narrow jeweled shoulder straps being the substitute.

Some evening models have apron drapery in the front, and an odd thing about it is that the apron section falls longer than the foundation. The apron is of metallic lace.

The pointed decolletage is a thing of the past. The square cut neck line is in high favor and it is severely plain. being seldom softened with trimming ivory, white, black or creamy tones of any description.

A great many beads and sequins are used on evening dresses, especially on white satin and net. Black nets with blue sequins and all shades of red over cream laces are used.

The gown pictured here is a shimmering affair of silver tissue, suggest ing moonlight in effect. The bodice of shirred black velvet is supported over the shoulders with straps of black jet and finished at the top with a narrow plaiting of the silver tissue. A silver cord encircles the waist. The skirt consists of a series of circular tunics. For the many social functions that will be crowded into the pre-Lenten sea son a gown of this sort is both modish and becoming for most women.

When tailors make men's suits they first cut servages from the materials ter rugs than ordinary carpet rags when woven in the usual manner, and they are warm and rich looking, especially if dark colored warp is used, says the Mother's Magazine. Another advantage in favor of selvages is that they come in long strips and require little work in preparation for the

In place of sewing the rags in the usual fashion lay the end of one strip flat upon the end of another and sew together without doubling. Tailors usually throw away selvages and would therefore give them away upon request; others sell them to rag men for a few cents a pound.

If you wish to make braided rugs of selvage they must be used double.

KITCHEN FURNITURE.

Should Be Comfortable and Attractive. Yet Adapted to Use.

Every kitchen should boast at least one comfortable chair, for the competent cook can learn to perform many of her duties sitting as well as stand-

For greater efficiency and comfort the kitchen table is also of importance, for not only should it be strong and steady, but it should also be of the proper height for baking and kneading bread. It should have a deep drawer to hold agate and wooden spoons, forks and knives, cookie molds, etc.

Over the table either a convenient cabinet or a simple board may be nailed into place, upon which can be hung egg beaters, bread knives, measuring spoons-indeed, all those small things which will save a busy woman countless steps during the day's work.

There is a wide use of metal laces. Metal laces are used extensively for bodices and sleeves

Two-tone net tops are among the most fashionable laces.

Net top lace with hand run design is likely to be much used. Costumes of white net or lace are trimmed with ornaments of jet. Tulle and lace are extensively used both for day and evening robes. A very dashing novelty is a gold lace with the flower pattern in so light a silver as to look white.

Overdresses of lace hanging straight from the shoulders and fringed with beads are among the new fashion fea-

Jean Webster's Book to Improve

A book with a purpose is Miss Jean Webster's charming story, "Daddy Longlegs." Since it was published it has gone into many editions. The tale has been put on the stage in a play that is one of the successes of the season. Daddy Longlegs may do as much for the lonely little orphan child of the public institution as Oliver Twist did for English workhouse children.

The book has aroused public interest in the lot of the lonely and homeless children of the asylums, and many well to do people, inspired by the example of the Daddy Longlegs of the story. have come forward to adopt or bear the burden of expense of educating one or more orphans. It is said a wealthy New York bachelor has thus adopted forty children. The New York State Charities Aid society found so many requests for orphans for adoption coming in after the publication of the book that they appointed a special committee to look after the applications. Miss Vida Mary Clark, a warm hearted woman with experience in children's work, was appointed to take charge of the work.

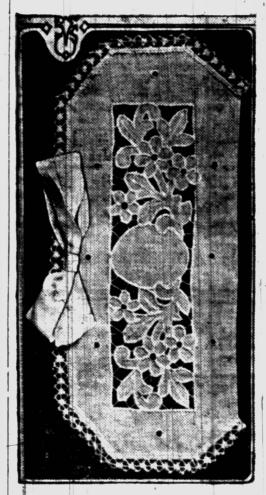

Miss Webster, the author of the book, is a Vassar graduate, and college girls have been particularly taken with the Daddy Longlegs idea.' In fact, playing fairy godmother to an orphan child has assumed the proportions of a fad, and, thanks to Miss Webster. the lot of little "Orphant Annie" is likely to be made a happy one.

Miss Webster is a grandniece of Mark Twain and has the sense of humor which seems to be a family gift. She has always been interested in philanthropic work and has written a number of books, most of them dealing with college girl life. She has lived in Italy for a number of years, but now resides in New York city.
